The Dour Hauptmann--He Is Enigma of "Crime of the Century"

These steely eyes riveted on the witness stand in Flemington, N. J.'s, tiny courtroom, Bruno Hauptmann maintains his role of enigma in the Lindbergh murder trial. His poker face remains immobile regardless of accusations hurled by prosecution or witnesses. When he relaxes his grim demeanor at all, it is to smile sardonically and inscrutably, as revealed by the pictures above.

Hope Is to Make Bid for Dist. 10 Basketball Meet

Young Business Men Will Seek to Raise $200 Guarantee Locally

BRINGS MANY HERE

Hope, Centrally Located, Is Most Logical Tournament Site

Hope will make a strong bid to bring the District 10 basketball tournament to this city, school officials announced Tuesday.

Members of District 10, representing more than 20 southwest Arkansas towns, will meet in Hope Saturday to select a place and set dates for the annual tournament.

At the same time dates and places will be selected for holding literary events and the spring track and field meet.

Need $200 Guarantee

School officials pointed out that a guarantee of $200 would be sufficient to assure Hope of the tournament. That amount is necessary to take care of expenses for visiting athletes and other expenditures.

Following the announcement by school authorities, officials of the Young Business Men's association said that its organization would launch a drive to raise the $200 if the business institutions of Hope desired to bring the tournament to this city.

It was pointed out that the tournament, which would require two days, would attract between 750 and 1,000 spectators daily.

Among the larger towns that would send delegations here are: Texarkana, DeQueen, Nashville, Horatio, Ashdown, Lewisville, Waldo, Stamps and many smaller towns and communities in the district.

Is Logical Location

Hope, being centrally located in the district, is the logical point for holding the tournament.

Delegates to the meeting here Saturday are expected to consider a possible formation of a Southwest Arkansas football conference to determine the championship of this section each year.

Coach Foy H. Hammons of Hope High School, announced that he was in favor of such a move. Other coaches over the district have advocated a district conference.

Legislation will be proposed at the next state teachers association meeting which will seek to inaugurate a play-off among district champions at the close of the regular season in order that a state champion may be determined.

J. A. Sullivan Runs for Fourth Ward

Contractor Candidate for Alderman in February Primary

J. A. Sullivan, well known Hope building contractor, announced in The Star's political column today that he would be a candidate for alderman from Ward Four in the Democratic city primary election February 12.

Mr. Sullivan has been a citizen of Hope for 45 years, and is believed to have constructed more local buildings than any other contractor in the city's history.

He is a considerable property owner, and his statement to the voters said: "I have no specific platform—but I am simply running in the interests of the people, the average citizen and taxpayer."

Dividends Issued by Hope's Banks

Citizens National and First National Re-Elect Officers Tuesday

Returning prosperity to this section was the opinion voiced Tuesday when officials and directors of Hope's two banks met, declared dividends and re-elected officers for the new year.

Officials of Citizens National bank reported that the year 1934 was "very satisfactory," and announced that a cash dividend was paid December 31 and that $10,000 had been added to the surplus.

C. C. Spragins, cashier, expressed optimism over the outlook for banking activities in 1935. Officers re-elected by Citizens bank are:

R. M. LaGrone, president; R. M. Briant, vice-president; L. D. Reed, vice-president; C. C. Spragins, cashier; J. C. Hall, assistant cashier.

Directors: R. M. LaGrone, R. M. Briant, C. C. Spragins, A. L. Black, L. D. Reed, Wm. Temple, O. A. Graves and J. A. Haynes.

First National bank issued a 15 per cent dividend, and reports that business last year was the "best in the history of the bank."

"Normal conditions are returning and we look for 1935 to be an even better year for the banking and other business institutions of this section," Lloyd Spencer, cashier, said.

Officers and directors of First National bank, re-elected, are:

R. G. McRae, president; N. P. O'Neal, vice-president; Lloyd Spencer, cashier; Syd McMath, assistant cashier; Roy Stephenson, assistant cashier; Charles C. McRae, E. P. Stewart and James R. Henry, directors.

Rally for Schools Held in Nevada Co.

Highways Provided for, Now Schools' Turn, J. B. Silvey Says

PRESCOTT, Ark.—A county-wide mass meeting was held Friday night at Central High School, near here, when the educational program sponsored by the state Department of Education was approved practically unanimously.

J. B. Silvey, Nevada county representative, pointed out that highways and other necessities had been provided for liberally by the state, and said that now more attention should be paid to the schools. He said he would seek more liberal appropriations for educational purposes during the coming legislative session.

Nude Movie Film Is Barred by America

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Treasury Monday barred from American exhibition the Czechoslovakian film "Ecstasy" in which the heroine appeared in one scene in the nude.

Secretary Morgenthau said he had not seen the film himself but had approved the recommendations of his commissioners of customs and of the chief lawyer of the department. Mrs. Morgenthau viewed the picture here.

The film was impounded by the New York customs authorities after it had been denounced by the pope as well as Fritz Mandel, millionaire husband of the heroine whose screen name was "Hedy Keisler."

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

JUSTICE S. F. Huntley has proposed what seems to me the most sensible solution thus far advanced for the financial problems of Arkansas' county governments.

At the adjourned session of the Hempstead Quorum Court Monday at Washington he suggested—and the court so recommended to the legislature—that a general county salary law be drafted to provide whenever a county gets into debt the elective officers shall be required to turn back to a sinking fund a certain percentage of their salary, until the debt is paid.

This would apply to government the same principle that has always applied to private business—the managers are responsible for the bills.

I am no lawyer, but I imagine if a general county salary bill were drawn to apply to all counties on a graduated population-and-area scale, so that the bill would not be knocked out as "local legislation," then this sinking-fund provision could be properly included.

It would simply be stating that in good times we pay good wages and in poor times we pay poor wages—a fact which is eventually as true of government as it is true of private business.

And the best part of Justice Huntley's proposal is that it would make county debt elimination as nearly automatic as is humanly possible.

X X X

County Judge Stephens and Senator Wilson and the justices had a good time Monday.

The senator was getting ready to go away to the legislature, which convenes at Little Rock January 14—and the judge and the justices were giving the senator his "sailing orders."

Altogether they gave Senator Wilson five proposed changes in state law as affecting county government. I think four of these changes are necessary and good—but I do not think county government is ready as yet to ask the state to give it more money in the name of good roads.

The State of Arkansas has given Hempstead county in gasoline tax "turnback" since the Martineau road law in 1927 a total of about $150,000.

We have had in that time three county judges—but today there is still no all-weather county road in Hempstead except that which was built by the CWA.

We started in 1927 with a 5-cent state gasoline tax.

We kept squandering money with the county judges.

We got no local roads.

But the state gasoline tax that was 5 cents a gallon in 1927 is today 6½ cents a gallon—and if you keep on listening to the county judges you will pay a still higher tax in the years to come, and you won't have any county roads then, either.

I am no prophet—but readers of this newspaper know that what I wrote about the gasoline "turnback" in 1929 came to pass.

You got no roads—but you did get a 1½-cent-a-gallon tax increase.

X X X

I don't care who is county judge.

I wrote this about the others and I write it now about Judge Stephens. Under the absolute governmental system of county judges in Arkansas it is impossible to build improved all-weather highways.

You might have a good, conscientious judge one year, and a bad one the next—but the system goes on regardless: A system in which our professional tax-eaters rush the judge for jobs working a dirt road that washes away each spring and fall.

If the judge has money, they know it; and they know that he alone has final authority to say where it shall be spent.

We want more money for county roads—but first we want a system that will guarante that roads will be built.

If the state gives the counties any more money it must first provide that a local commission, and not the judge alone, shall administer that money. Then we will get some roads.

5 Slain in Church Fight in Mexico

Students Attack Headquarters of Radical Anti-Church Group

MEXICO, D. F.—(AP)—Mexico's bitter church-state conflict grew graver Tuesday after five persons were shot during a demonstration against the radical Red Shirt organization and the church openly defied the government's socialistic education program.

An estimated crowd of 1,500, most of them students, attacked the headquarters of the Red Shirt Youths' group, sworn enemies of the church, and five fell in the subsequent shooting. Twenty-two received minor injuries.

U. S. Revenue Taxes Jump 42 Per Cent

2 Billion 300 Million Reflect New Taxes and Better Collections

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A jump of 42 per cent in internal revenue taxes collected by the government in the fiscal year ended last June 30 was announced by the Treasury Tuesday.

Collections amounted to $2,300,816,308. The gain in general revenue was reflected in additional levies and increases in collections of old ones.

Circuit Court in Session, Prescott

Ned Stewart, New Prosecutor, Opens His First Proceedings

PRESCOTT, Ark. — Circuit Court convened here Monday with Judge Lexter Bush presiding and the newly elected prosecuting attorney, Ned Stewart of Lewisville, representing the state. The juries were empaneled and W. S. Roe of Prescott was named foreman of the grand jury. Civil cases will be heard this week and criminal trials will start next Monday. Both dockets are light.

New Legislation for Oil Necessary

Ickes Gets Busy — Court Has Dealt Whole NRA Program Hard Blow

WASHINGTON—(AP)—New legislation to regulate the production and shipment of illegally-produced oil will be sought by Secretary Ickes as the result of the United States Supreme Court decision Monday holding unconstitutional section 9-C of the recovery act (NRA).

Ickes made his purpose known at a press conference Tuesday.

To Keep Lid On

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The New Deal, deprived of the portion of the NRA which the United States Supreme Court tossed out the window as unconstitutional, still strove Tuesday to keep the federal lid on "hot oil."

At the same time the belief was expressed in one quarter on Capitol Hill that the high tribunal's act in scrapping the oil control provision in the recovery act spelled the doom of some other New Deal legislation.

Senate in Recess

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The new and still untried congress dug quickly into a mass of organization detail Tuesday preliminary to its big job of translating President Roosevelt's work relief program into law and voting enough cash to pay the bill.

The senate was in recess until Thursday, the respite being taken to give important committees time to start functioning.

Immediately, the banking group began consideration of Senator Vandenberg's bill to empower the Deposit Insurance Corporation to regulate interest rates and thereby remove the grounds for the corporation's recent clash with Senator Glass.

Writing new membership slates for its standing committees was the job that topped the house program Tuesday.

Presbyterian Men to Meet Tuesday

Dinner to Be Served at 6:45 o'Clock at Local Church

Following a custom recently established the men of First Presbyterian church of Hope will hold their third monthly dinner meeting Tuesday night at 6:45 o'clock in the church dining room.

The dinner is being served by one of the Women's Auxiliary units of the church and is financed through a free-will offering contributed by those attending. The dinner will be preceeded by a 15 minutes of pipe-organ music with Mrs. Kate Holland as organist. Following the dinner a short program including musical numbers and short talks will be presented before the members and their guests.

Herbert Morely is serving as the first president of the organization.

J. R. Williams to Run for Council

He Announces as Aldermanic Candidate From Ward One

J. R. Williams, Hope lumberman, will be a candidate for alderman from Ward One in the Democratic city primary election February 12, according to his formal announcement in The Star's political announcement column today.

Mr. Williams, widely known Arkansas lumber operator, is manager of J. L. Williams & Sons, this city. He is a native of Arkansas, has been in the lumber business all his life, and has been a resident of Hope for four years.

He is a considerable taxpayer locally, and this is his first campaign for public office.

Denounces Move to Legalize Liquor

W. E. Elmore, Washington, Attacks Sen. Wilson's Statement

Editor The Star: I read in today's paper (January 6) the astonishing statement that our senator would, or does, stand for the licensing of whisky and betting on horse-racing in order to get money to have free schoolbooks and to support the tuberculosis sanatorium at Booneville.

Surely this is not what his constituents want is it?

If not, now is the time to speak.

I think it would be nice to have free schoolbooks, if we could get them in a respectable way. But—is it decent or right to license an immoral institution to support a moral one?

I am glad my youngest child has finished high school. I appreciate the diploma she has, but I had rather she had no diploma than to have it said that she received it through the saloon.

I plead with you for the purity of our youth in education, morals and godliness; but we will never get it through an open saloon.

I am the recipient of the state's courtesy through the Booneville sanatorium, and I thank God we didn't have to have a gambling den to get that institution.

I ask the good people of this county to speak out: We should let our representatives and senator know we don't want any money that carries with it the price of indecency and

Jessie Hogue to Direct Star Cooking School Next Tuesday

Will Conduct Four Matinees at Saenger Theater Beginning Tuesday, January 15

No matter what else may be "just around the corner," the Happy Kitchen Cooking School, presented under the auspices of this newspaper, and presenting that national authority on foods and home economics, Miss Jessie Hogue, is there, only awaiting the scheduled dates, which are January 15-18 at the Saenger theater.

The lessons offered at these popular demonstrations will show how to utilize the most pleasant and economical methods of cookery; how to serve the right kind of food at the right seasons as a matter of health, comfort and efficiency; to care for the home and all its necessary equipment, how to have modern labor-saving devices and to become familiar with the products of leading manufacturers and distributors.

More money, more leisure, more comfort, and generally happier lives have resulted from the Happy Kitchen Cooking School wherever they have been held, and now this newspaper is pleased to extend this service to every woman who is willing to receive it.

At the forthcoming Happy Kitchen Cooking School Miss Hogue, one of the country's highest authorities on matters pertaining to the home, and especially to the kitchen, will conduct the demonstration and lectures. She covers every phase of the home and personal well-being. Her long training in American schools, and her long association with civic organizations in various parts of the country, give her complete command of subjects relating to the providing and preparation of foods and the management of the home.

Jessie Hogue

The Happy Kitchen Cooking School will be held at the Saenger beginning next Tuesday. The public is cordially invited to attend any and all sessions. There is no charge for admittance, and no obligation at any time.

Lindy's Neighbor Saw Carpenter in Road on Fatal Day

And as He Points Finger at Prisoner the Lights Go Out

A DRAMATIC TALE

Taxi-Driver Testifies Hauptmann Sent Note to "Jafsie" Condon

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—An aged former neighbor of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh pointed a palsied finger at the accused Bruno Richard Hauptmann Tuesday and declared he saw him near the Lindbergh home on the day that the Lindbergh baby was stolen from his crib and slain.

The witness, Amandus Hochmuth, 87, positively identified Hauptmann as the man in a dirty green automobile who passed him at his home on March 1, 1932, turned into the Lindbergh road and "glared at me as if he saw a ghost."

This melodramatic surprise—heightened by the extinguishing of the courtroom lights just as the old man pointed accusingly at Hauptmann—was sandwiched between other highlights of the Tuesday morning session.

The state failed in a second attempt to get the ladder, down which it contends the baby was carried to his death, into the evidence. The court ruled, however, that the ladder should be again offered in evidence after more testimony about it had been offered.

Another Identification

John Perrone, New York taxicab driver, identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a dollar to deliver a note to Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon in March, 1932.

Perrone, at the request of Attorney General Wilentz, came from the witness stand, walked over to Hauptmann, slapped his hand on Hauptmann's shoulder and said:

"That's the man"

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Betty Gow, pert Scotch nurse from whose care the Lindbergh baby was stolen and slain, faced a three-hour fire of defense questions Monday and later collapsed, tearful and shaken, in the courthouse where Bruno Richard Hauptmann is on trial for his life.

On the witness stand her voice was calm and even as she answered the searching queries of Edward J. Reilly, she kept her composure bravely when the chief of Hauptmann's defense steadily pursued his effort to show the crime was the work of an "inside" gang of four.

Again the pretty nursemaid who came from Scotland to testify, felt the tiny garments the child had worn when she put him to sleep in his crib at Hopewell. Again she saw and touched the flannel shirt she had sewn to protect his chest against the cold. Again she touched the thumbguard she put on him.

But in the end the ordeal of direct and cross examination was too great.

She Is Overcome

Her eyes red from weeping, her slim figure quivering with emotion, she was forced to leave the courtroom. In an anteroom she collapsed.

Later the ladder down which, the state contends, Hauptmann carried the stolen baby from his nursery was brought into the court room. It provoked a storm of defense protests and was not immediately admitted as evidence.

Hauptmann, the cold eyed carpenter, listened intently as witnesses described the sectional ladder.

As he left court he turned to a guard and remarked:

"If I made that ladder. I'd be a second rate carpenter."

Prosecutors will try to prove that the baby was killed when the ladder splintered and broke that blustery night of March 1, 1932.

When court adjourned at the close of the fourth day of the kidnap-murder trial, State Fingerprint Expert Frank A. Kelly still was on the stand. He had testified that the found no fingerprints in the nursery.

The little nurse, grilled exhaustively about backstairs doings and her own actions on the night of the kidnaping and before it—and about her sailor friend, Henry (Red) Johnson—was quick, sometimes that, with her answers.

Few persons in the courtroom knew she had lost her self control when she quietly left court during the afternoon session. The prevailing opinion was that Miss Gow had shown a control of her emotions as great as Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh themselves.

For days preceding her appearance, however, she had been under a nervous strain induced by the expectation that soon she would have to tell her story.

The Thumbguard

When Reilly pressed her about her testimony that she had found the

Food Fads Aid Little in Athlete's Training.

We used to have a great many notions about the kind and amount of food athletes ought to eat. Certain foods, for instance, were said to be good for runners, and others were said to be bad for the wind.

With development of our moden knowledge of diet, we realize that it is not possible to give a distance runner endurance by any special food, or to make a hammer-thrower or football player stronger than he really is by feeding him raw meat.

All foods are made up of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts and vitamins, and must be taken in relations hip to the various proportions of these constituents. Liquids are necessary to life and have to be take by everyone to preserve health.

There are trainers who try to restrict the fluids taken by athletes to the bares tamount consistent with living, and by such action seriously injure the health of those whom they would benefit. This strange notion is particularly associated with the boxing ring, and many a trainer has lost his boxer a match because he did not allow sufficient liquids.

The best food is one which is easily digested. The accumulation of undigested material in the bowels is harmful to health and will interfere seriously with any physical effort. Furthermore, accumulation of undigested material in the bowels results in diversion of blood and the energy of the body toward the handling of that food, when they may be required elsewhere.

If large amounts of material in the form of food, fluids, or gas collect in the stomach and intestines, the diaphragm may be forced upwards, interfering with breathing and with action of the heart.

Because overcooking may harden the fibers of meat and make it difficult to digest, some trainers have gone to the opposite side and have fed raw meat, which is just about as difficult to digest.

Furthermore, these things are not palatable. There is little to be gained in aiding the digestion, if you produce at the same time nausea and a disturbance of the mind.

The athlete should not be forced to eat beyond the requirements of his natural appetite, regardless of the strange notion of some trainers that some people should eat enormous quantities of food and then exercise to work the material into their bodies.

Strength cannot be automatically acquired from food in this way.

The athlete requires protein for repair of his tissue. Furthermore, proteins and fats will give energy as well as carbohydrates. When it was found that sugar is used by the body in muscular activities, trainers began urging athletes to take sugar before races.

The evidence as to the usefulness of this method is not so well established as to make it worth adoption.

Individual requirements for food must be taken into account in relationship to all training. In general, athletes are urged to abstain from smoking and the drinking of alcoholic liquors.

The uses of alcohol in every day life are sometimes a sa stimulant to the appetite, sometimes as a sedative to overstrained nerves. The healthy athlete, with the effects of fresh air and exercise, does not require alcoholic assistance for his body activities.

The evidence as to the effect of tobacco on the respiration and on the heart is sufficient to indicate that it is certainly of no special use to the athlete. Many famous athletes have smoked tobacco without very seriously damaging their records, and in some cases smoking has been useful in quieting overstrained nerves.

In general, however, it is no serious matter to deprive a young athlete entirely of tobacco.

"Take any article, for instance," he droned on. "When it is bought it goes to the buyer—"

"What about coal?" interposed a weary voice.

The professor gazed over his glasses at the interrupter.

"Well," he snapped, "what about it?"

"When coal's bought, doesn't it go to the cellar?" asked the youthful student.

The Price Poe Paid For His Greatness—Harvey Allen Writes of Poet's Tragic Career

Eight years ago, long before "Anthony Adverse" had taught Americans to take their fiction in large doses, Harvey Allen wrote "Israfel," a two-volume biography of Edgar Allen Poe. The book fas applauded by the critics and more or less ignored by the public.

A revised one-volume edition of "Israfel" hase just been published, and both the author's prominence and the merits of the book itself make it worth a new review.

"Israfel" will probably come to be regarded as "the" biography of Poe. It is extraordinarily detailed, the fruit of much patient labor with obscure sources; it covers every phase of the amazing and tragic life of Poe with scrupulous care, and draws a full-length, three-dimenson portrait of one of the most talented, demon-ridden figures in all literature.

All the facts are here; his boyhood in Richmond, his brief university career, his enlistment in the army, his term at West Point, and his life-long struggle with grinding poverty (his highest annual salary was $800); but the man's life was so strange, and his nature so extraordinarily complex, that the facts are useless without an intelligent interpretation—which Mr. Allen provides.

He finds the key to Poe's career in his poor health. His heart was weak; he could not endure high tension and excitement without stimulants; and these, in turn, aggravated his condition and drove him to despair and death.

He was possessed by a great genius, and it tourtured and wrecked him, but it left American literature much the richer.

Published by Farrar and Rinehart. "Israfel" sells for $3.50.

Mother Should Learn Value of Silence

Arthur is playing with his new builder set. The little fellow has the great big house, as he calls it, just about finished; but to you and me it looks like a hodge-podge of sticks and blocks.

However, he is as proud as Punch of his handiwork. Today for the first time he has mastered the little holes and stick ends. That takes brain work, I assure you. And struggle and much twisting of tongue.

He runs to the kitchen for a drink of water. He is only gone a minute, but it only takes a minute for the baby to wiggle out of her pen and creep over to the fascinating construction work.

Arthur trots back to behold his love being worried like a feather caught in an electric fan. Baby is waving "the great big house" around in little short jerks and the air is full of flying timber.

Arthur Goes Berserk

Her brother gives a whoop and descends like Judgment. He is too mad to cry—yet. With a whoop that is half way between a strangle and a "tiger" he knocks her over and kicks. When their mother hurries in, there is Arthur on his knees, his head buried hopelessly against them, sobbing his heart out. The baby, too, is screaming.

The siutation is plain. It isn't the first time that affairs between the little folk have reached an impasse beyond the help of diplomacy. But it is the first time she has ever seen her son go so completely berserk. She hesitates. Who needs her most at the instant, the outraged boy or the scared baby?

Hurt Beyond Amends

And then something in the despairing attitude of the boy warns her that here is a hurt not to be lightly dealt with, something beyond comfort or amends. She picks up the baby, hushes her, and carries her upstairs for her nap.

The sobbing downstairs continues. She says nothing but quietly sets about getting the bottle heated and pulling down shades. Then she goes down and sits in the room with the boy but without talking. She pretends to read a book. Her next move will depend on what Arthur does. He knows she is there. If he needs her, she knows he will make some sign.

After a while his crying is easier. He rolls over on the floor and lies there sobbing softly. Still she doesn't touch him. But very quietly she drops a handkerchief within his reach. He reaches out and gets it and wipes his nose and eyes.

Then he gets up and crawls on her knee.

Ready to Listen

Now and not until now she knows that he is ready to listen to her. But still she says nothing about the trouble. She turns the leaves of the book. There are some uninteresting pictures, but they will do. She makes little talk about them. Arthur is at that stage when one idea is giving up its hold and letting the mind slide into another. It brings peace and that is enough. In ten minutes he is building another house. The incident and shock are forgotten.

What a lovely mother! How wise and sensible! There are times even in a little child's life when words are useless and irritating. I believe the ability to recognize the values of silence is one of the greatest assets a mother can possess.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Glorifying Yourself

Beauty Is Vacation Asset

The girl who plans a winter vacation in the sunny south should begin right now to glorify herself for the holiday. If she has gained weight, she should get busy with daily exercises and reducing routines. If last fall's perament wave is pretty well grown out, she ought to start preparing her hair for a new one.

Remember a permanent wave will be more successful and lovely if your hair is in healthy condition. Give yourself or have your beauty operator give you at least six hot oil treatments between now and the time you make an appointment for a permanent. In addition, use a good tonic, made especially to correct whatever scalp ailment you have. There are tonics for normal as well as for dry and oily scalps, you know.

Make sure the operator tests your hair before she starts to give you a wave. Only by testing can she determine how much heat will be needed. If you're paying for a specific brand of permanent, look for its name on each pad. However, keep in mind that the operator is just as important as the brand. If she's conscientious and experienced, you have nothing to worry about.

Make a careful analysis of your complexion. If it's dry, try to remedy that condition before you buy your ticket. You won't have time for facials while on vacation.

NEXT: A smooth, new coiffure.

Little Rock Loses Its Air Mail Line

American Airlines Plan to Fly Through Without Stopping

LITTLE ROCK.—How Little Rock's air mail and passenger service will be affected with the inauguration next Sunday of the American Airlines transcontinental route from New York to Los Angeles, through Washington, D. C., remained uncertain Sunday night, but city and Chamber of Commerce officials intend to take steps to ascertain definitely what is contemplated.

A dispatch from New York Sunday night omitted Little Rock from the list of cities at which stops will be made by the transcontinental transports, and requests for explanations from airlines officials did not elicit a response that clarified the situation entirely.

This much appears certain: Little Rock faces the prospects of loss of the service provided at present by the planes arraiving a' 11:02 (eastbound) and 7:30 p. m., (westbound), carrying passengers, mail and express. However, condtion of the municipal airport field has nothing whatever to do with the apparent decision of American Airlines to curtail Little Rock service.

Substitute Asked for AAA Program

Dies, of Texas, Will Introduce Radically Different Measure

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An atempt to supplant the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's (AAA) program with something "diametrically" different, was announced Monday by Representative Dies, Texas Democrat.

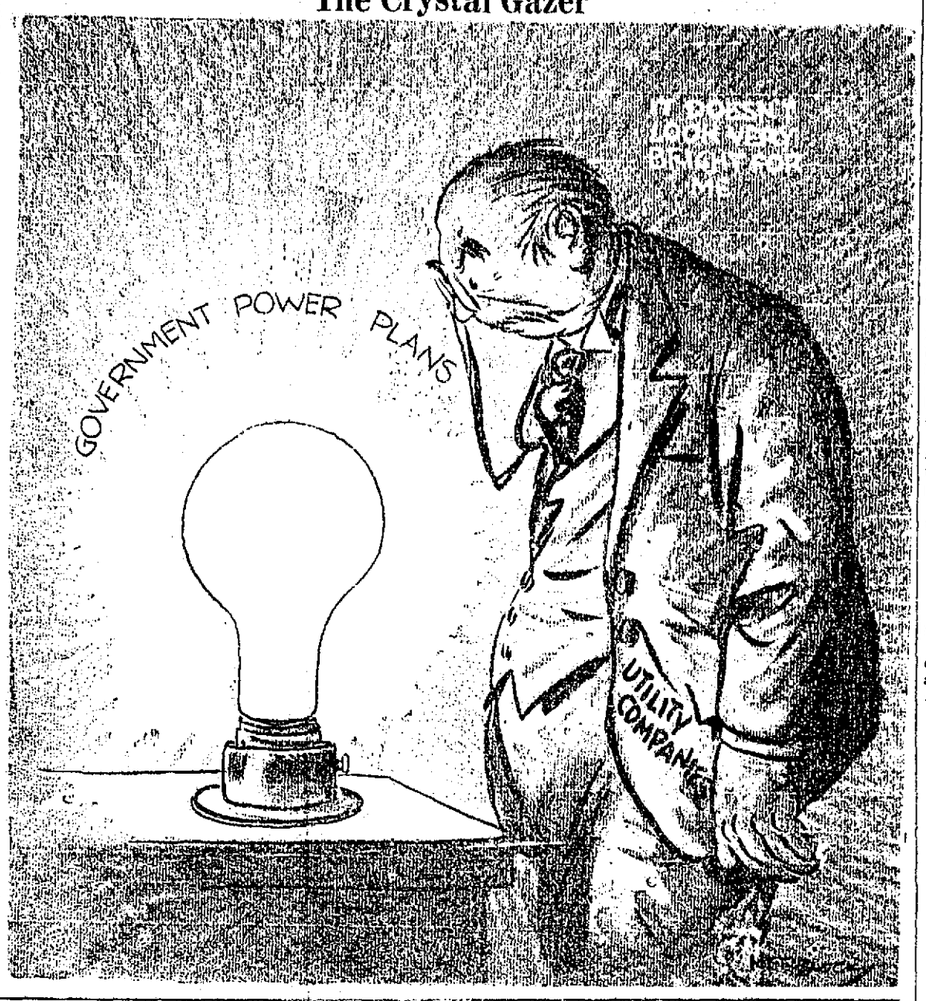

He said he would try this week to enlist the support of national farm agencies for a plan of "traffic benefits" for farmers.

The domestic consumption of all crops of which there is a surplus available for export would be estimated, and this consumption would be split among all producers, each receiving an equal share.

For their allotments the farmers would be given a tariff benefit determined by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Delaware, New Hampshire, and South Carolina called their chief executives presidents under their first constitutions. The title was changed to governor by South Caroline in 1778. Lelaware and New Hampshire made the change in 1792.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER breaks her engagement to TONY MICKLE the same day that PETER KENDALL tells VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancee, that everything is over between them. Ann thinks she still loves Tony and Peter believes he still cares for Valeria, but when chance brings the two together and Peter asks Ann to marry him she agrees.

They go to Florida and are happy there. Then Peter is recalled home. His family snubs Ann and Valeria tries to make trouble between Ann and Peter. She succeeds finally and Ann goes away, leaving no trace of her whereabouts.

Peter, desperately in love with her by this time, grows lonelier as the weeks pass. His efforts to locate Ann are fruitless.

She has found work as governess in the home of MRS. TRACY, an artist. ALLAN VINCENT, Mrs. Tracy's brother, is attentive to Ann.

Ann learns the house Allan is decorating belongs to Peter. Convinced that Peter plans to divorce her and marry Valeria soon, Ann leaves the Tracy home. She becomes a clerk in a second-hand book store, sharing an apartment with SHEILA DAVIS.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLI

DURING the long, lonely weeks Ann was tempted more than once to call Sarah. She had wanted to slip into the church to see Sarah and Mac married, but had been afraid to risk it. No, she must not see Sarah. Not until after Peter's marriage. Then perhaps she could go back and pick up the threads of the old life again and weave for herself a pattern of security and peace. If she communicated with Sarah there would be only one result. Sarah would see Peter and he would come forward with a generous offer to secure Ann's future.

Anything, anything would be preferable to that!

"A young man came in to buy a book from you," Professor Barber told Ann one day when she returned from lunch. He was smiling broadly.

"A young man?" Ann questioned, trying not to let excitement show in her voice. Her heart began to beat furiously. "Was he tall?"

"Yes. A tall young man." Professor Barber's faded blue eyes, under bushy brows, beamed at her. "So anxious he was, too."

Peter—but it might not be Peter!

"Was his hair light or dark?" Ann was very busy all at once, putting her books back in their places.

"How should I know? With the shop so dark and my eyes not so good as they once were. But a very handsome young man, I could see."

Mrs. Barber had come in the room. "I think his hair was very dark, Father. He was a scholar, perhaps. He wanted to find Gibbons' 'Rise and Fall.' But when father could not lay his hands on it he bought "Sartor Resartus' and seemed just as satisfied. Father gave him your address at home."

No. It could not be Peter, this young man who wanted the "Rise and Fall." It sounded more like Tony. If Tony had located her he must be pledged to secrecy. He must be made to see how much it would hurt her if he revealed her hiding place.

Ann half-expected Tony to call as she prepared supper. She wanted to see him because she was lonely and the dull evenings shut within the cheap little apartment were getting on her nerves. But she dreaded seeing him, too. Tony was always difficult and it might be hard to convince him that there was only friendship for him now in her heart. She could not tell him she loved Peter. How scornful he would be if he knew she had given her heart to a man who cared nothing for her.

* * *

SHEILA would come in presently. Sheila would eat and go out with Jimmy Matthews, the friendly young man who looked like a prize fighter but did nothing more exciting than work in the shipping department of a wholesale store.

Ann suspected Sheila and Jimmy were much in love, though Sheila ridiculed the idea. "Marry Jimmy!" she had said. "Gracious, you don't think I intend to be poor all my days, do you? Don't you think I have lived in this town long enough to have acquired some sense? I wouldn't look at Jimmy. There's a floorwalker at the store who has it all over him. Got a bungalow paid for. He could double for Ramon Novarro, has nice black hair, smooth and shiny—not stubby and hard to keep down like Jimmy's. What do you think I am anyway, marrying an Irishman who drives a second-hand car?"

After this outburst Ann stopped speculating. But she was not convinced.

Sheila brought the newspaper home every night. Jimmy read it first and then met her on the corner after work and gave it to her.

Sheila was slipping the key in the door now. She came in, dropped her coat on a chair, kicked off her pumps and threw herself down on the couch in the tiny living room. The couch opened up at night to become a not too-comfortable bed.

"Gosh, I'm dead. My feet hurt so I can't stand up. I hope I never see another Founder's Day sale."

"Many people?"

"Millions! A lot came in just as I was getting ready to leave and ploughed through the table tapestries. I had to straighten them again. And then, with my feet killing me, some fresh guy on the car tramped all over them when he couldn't get my attention any other way. What a world! I'll be out to help you in a minute, Ann."

"I don't need you. Everything is about ready. We have steak and some hot soup—I stopped by a restaurant and brought it home in a carton. I baked some apples, too."

"Sounds swell. Sure you don't need help?"

"Positive. Supper's ready to be dished up."

"You're a swell kid, Ann. I can't understand how you've slipped by the marriage bureau so long. Did you have a bust with your boy friend?"

"Something like that," Ann said, in a muffled voice.

* * *

SHEILA thought it was too bad about Ann who had contrived, with all her good looks, to get no farther than that old bookstore and this makeshift apartment. If Sheila had to work all day like Ann, ride the street cars and never go anywhere she would probably jump in the river.

She voiced her thoughts, "I'd jump off a bridge if I thought I was going to spend the rest of my life working at Staub & Stein's. But I'm not."

"Of course you won't," Ann said. "Some day you'll marry."

"Yes, that's what I meant."

There was something in Sheila's voice, a happy note that had not been there before.

"Sheila! Don't tell me you're getting married?"

"Yes."

"The nice floorwalker?"

"Well, I should say not. What ever made you think I'd marry that old crab? I wouldn't have him on a bet."

Ann smiled. "It must be Jimmy."

"Well, of course."

Sheila waited for this to sink in, and then continued. "Oh, Ann, we're going to have the cutest flat with a real bedroom and a kitchen—not a kitchenette. And Jimmy's friend did a grand paint job on the car. And Jimmy's had a raise. I'm so happy I don't really mind anything. Not even Founder's Day."

"I'm glad for you." Ann said. "Jimmy's a nice boy. When are you planning to marry?"

"About Christmas. Christmas would be a fine time, don't you think? We sort of thought of marrying on Christmas Day. Have you ever heard of anybody marrying on Christmas Day?"

The question caught Ann unprepared. After a moment she said, trying to control her voice, "Yes, Sheila, I have." She was remembering last Christmas, coming out of the parsonage with Peter.

She turned and went back into the kitchenette, mechanically putting china on the table.

* * *

SHEILA'S animated conversation flowed in to her. "Think of having a living room, a bedroom and a kitchen. There's a tiled bath, too, Ann. And Jimmy's mother has broken up housekeeping and gone to her daughter's and she is going to give us enough to furnish one room. We'll buy everything else on installments. I've some things in the 'lay-away.' The 'lay-away's' just a working girl's heaven. If you ask me. All my things will be paid for by Christmas."

"Are some blue-checked aprons laid away?"

"How did you know?"

"I guess every girl wants blue-checked aprons to wear in her kitchen." There was a wistful note in Ann's voice.

"I couldn't resist them. They were on sale, marked to 49 cents. Ann, I'm so happy! Jimmy's not so much to look at but I like everything about him, even his big hands and freckles. Ain't love grand!"

She was ruffling the pages of the newspaper.

After dinner Ann would take the newspaper and turn to the legal statistics. They held a strange fascination for her. She would read them fearfully, half expecting to see an announcement that Peter had filed suit for divorce on ground of desertion. It was like a reprieve—each time she failed to find it.

Now that Peter and Valeria were furnishing a home there could be no doubt that the time was near when he would be seeking a divorce. Perhaps the dark-haired young man had been a lawyer who had come to suggest a settlement and see how she felt about Peter getting his divorce.

Sheila was saying, "I wouldn't exchange my Jimmy for anybody—not even for this Peter Kendall with all his money!"

"What did you say?" Ann, her face very white, stood in the doorway.

"I was saying I wouldn't swap Jimmy fo this millionaire fellow. For crying out loud—look what he's doing now!"

Liner Grounded on Reef in Bahamas

Ward Liner Ashore, But Passengers Are Taken Off Safely

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—Rescue vessels picked up 53 passengers and an undetermined number of the crew of the Ward liner Havana Sunday after the vessell went aground on a dangerous coral reef off the nothern tip of the Bahamas islands.

The El Oceana, of the Southern Pacific lines, and the Feten, United Fruit vessel, effected the rescue, dashing to the scene after the Havana sent out an SOS saying it was leaking badly and had placed the passengers overboard in lifeboats.

For more than four hours the passengers bobbed about in heavy swells near the reef before the coast guard plane Sirus guided the El Ocean to the position where the boats had drifted about a mile north of Havana.

Sunshine Still

When life is hard to understand,
Then turn to things quite close at hand:
The homely things, the humble task.
These will not fail the peace you ask.
Forgetting mooted good and ill,
Your life will gain some sunshine still.
And as you seek, so you will find
The roadway smooth, the guidance kind.
Not only from the world without
Comes joy but through a courage stout.
Brave hearts have bliss no blight can kill
And through the years some sunshine still.
Then leave behind the dread, the doubt,
And shut the questioning fear without:
Meet each today in valiant mood
And welcome only what is good.
Triumph at last your cup will fill
And you will gain all sunshine still.
—Selected.

The Brookwood P. T. A. will hold their January meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3, at the Brookwood school. A full attendance is urged.

—o—

The John Cain chapter, D. A. R. will meet Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Miss Mary Carrigan North Elm street with Miss Lucy Boyd and Mrs. Dan Green as associate hostesses. A splendid program will be led by Mrs. George Spragins.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. Minor Gordon were called to Russellville Tuesday on account of the passing of Mrs. Gordon's brother, Homer Shinn, who passed on at his home in that city Monday night.

—o—

Mrs. Bessie D. Green, Mrs. T. R. Billingsley and Mrs. D. B. Thompson were hostesses to the members of Circle No. 2 of the W. M. S. of the Methodit church on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the dining hall of the church. The meeting, the first of the new year, opened with the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," followed by a very appropriate devotional and prayer by Mrs. Thompson. Mrs. Bessie D. Green, the new leader gave a most inspiring message, in which she urged each member to assist in making this a banner year, through service and prayer, with co-operation as the watchword. Mrs. Stith Davenport, chairman of the nominating committee announced the following officers: Mrs. T. R. Billingsley, assistant leader, Mrs. W. W. Johnson, treasurer; Mrs. Walter Miller, assistant treasurer; Mrs. H. H. Stuart, secretary, and Mrs. D. B. Thompson, counselor. With the reading of the pledge, Mrs. Green conducted a beautiful candle lighted service, the candles representing, service, gifts and praise. Mrs. Davenport as chairman of the ways and means committee presented plans for the first quarter, which were received with much interest, and each member pledging her support. At the close of the meeting, the hostesses served a delicious salad course with hot tea to 19 members and one visitor.

—o—

Miss Winnie Lee Floyd has returned to State Teachers' College, Conway, after a holiday vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Floyd.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Barr and little daughter, Anne, have returned from a visit with relatives in Mount Pleasant, Texas.

—o—

A most interesting meeting of the W. M. S. of the First Christian church was held on Monday afternoon in the Carter home on South Elm street with Mrs. Mary Carter and Mrs. Walter Carter as hostesses, and Mrs. J. R. Floyd as leader. A very inspiring devotional, prepared by Miss Polly Shipp, a Christian worker was given by Mrs. Guy Holt closing with prayer by Mrs. Holt for the workers. Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp told of the work among the Japanese in Los Angeles. A beautiful violin number was given by Miss Regina Bayse, with Miss Harriett Story at the piano. Following the missionary program the Ladies Aid held a business session and tendered a shower for Rev. and Mrs. Guy Holt, who have recently moved into the church parsenage. During the social hour delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

—o—

In spite of the rainy day, a very enthusiastic meeting of Circle No. 4 of the W. M. S. of the Methodist church was held on Monday afternoon at the home of their leader, Mrs. Minor Gordon with 23 responding to the roll call. Mrs. Dale Wilson and Mrs. Edwin Ward were associate hostesses. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by prayer by Mrs. Gordon. A very helpful devotional based on "Why Nehemiah Built the Walls of Jerusalem," was given by Miss Mamie Briant. Mrs. J. H. Arnold gave the report of the nominating committee as follows: Miss Mamie Briant, assistant leader, Mrs. J. H. Arnold, counselor; Mrs. John P. Cox, treasurer; Mrs. E. G. Richards, secretary. This report was followed by a short business period at which time, the leader announced her committees for the new year. A splendid talk on "The Challenge of the New Year" was given by the pastor, Dr. Fred Harrison. Mrs. Frank Stanley, the new Missionary Society president read a letter from Mrs. Helen Bourne, secretary of education and promotion, and outlined her plans for the new year. Following the pledge service led by Mrs. J. H. Arnold, the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Edwin Ward followed by delicious refreshments served by the hostesses.

The rhythm orchestra will meet at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday at the home of Mrs. John Wellborn. The harmonica band will meet at 4 p. m.

—o—

Mrs. A. H. Wade of Blevins entertained a number of friends at an informal shower at her home January 4, in honor of Lorene Honea Arnold. An interesting program was rendered, which included everyone present. Many games were played and the announcement of the approaching wedding was announced by jig-saw puzzles, when placed together formed this inscription. Announcing the approaching wedding of Lorene Honea Arnold to Elmer M. Bell on January 5, 1935. At 3:30 the bride-elect was led to the dining table which was piled high with gifts. The next few minutes were spent opening and admiring the lovely presents. The hostess assisted by Mrs. Roy W. Bonds, Mrs. Sanford Bond, Mrs. Harlon H. Honea served a most tempting plate. Those present were: Mrs. Leslie White, Mrs. Floyd Brooks, Mrs. Joe Bailey, Mrs. Bob Bonds, Miss Teressa Ann Bonds, Mrs. Melton White, Mrs. Ira Brooks, Mrs. Aubrey Bonds, Mrs. E. M. Bonds, Mrs. C. A. slain baby's thumbguard near the house a month after the kidnaping on her way back from a trip to the gate, her eyes flashed.

"Did you drop it on your way down?" asked Reilly, suddenly.

"I did not," she reported.

Q. Sure about that?"

A. Positive, that."

Earlier, she acknowledged that she "probably" had told Johnson, her suitor, now in Norway, that Mrs. Lindbergh had decided not to bring the baby back from Hopewell to the Dwight Morrow estate at Englewood the day preceding the kidnaping—Monday, February 29.

It had been the Lindberghs' habit to remain at the Hopewell house only over the week ends.

Q. Did you tell Red Johnson?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you tell Red Johnson that Mrs. Lindbergh and the baby were not returning?

A. I can't recall exactly telling him, but I probably would in conversation.

Q. Well, he didn't work on the (Morrow) estate, did he?

A. But I saw him that night, that evening.

Q. You saw him Monday evening?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go with him?

A. I just don't recall; riding I believe.

Johnson was questioned during the kidnaping investigation and later deported for illegal entry. At the time of his interrogation he was asked about the fact that a milk bottle had been found in a car which he drove to Connecticut.

The nurse, who was summoned to Hopewell from the Morrow estate after the decision to remain there with the baby, also said she had talked with Johnson by tlephone the night of the kidnaping.

At another time, she sent the courtroom into gales of laughter when Reilly asked her: "Now, you are a very bright young lady, aren't you?"

"I am," she shot back.

She denied, at another point, that she and Violet Sharpe, Morrow housemaid, ever had visited any boat owned by Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, elderly Bronx educator who was ransom negotiator for Colonel Lindbergh. Miss Sharpe committed suicide during the police investigation of the kidnaping.

Q. So you say you have never visited with Violet Sharpe any yacht or boat that was owned by Dr. Condon?

A. No, I didnt.

Long's Fight With Standard Settled

Compromise Reached on State Tax Against Crude Oil at Refinery

NEW ORLEANS — (AP) — Senator Huey P. Long said Sunday night that a compromise agreement reached between J. C. Hilton president of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana, and him had been approved by the company's general office in New York and that the emergency over the proposed five cent tax on crude oil had passed.

"I am standing here in the dining room of the Roosevelt hotel with the president of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana," said Senator Long. "I am going to buy him a dinner and I am going to pay the check as the poor company cannot stand the expense.

"The New York office has accepted our agreement and everything is all right and everybody is happy," he added.

The compromise between the senatorial dictator of Louisiana and the Standard Oil president served to put a wet blanket on a mass meeting of oil workers assembled in Baton Rouge to protest the tax which resulted in the oil company discharging 1,000 workers in the Baton Rouge plant.

Demand for Farm Loans Falls Off

St. Louis Bank's Applications Only One-Third of a Year Ago

More than $116,640,000 was loaned to 54,159 farmers of Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas by the four units of the Farm Credit Administration of St. Louis during the year 1934, according to F. W. Niemeyer, general agent at St. Louis.

The Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, the oldest and largest of the four units of the Farm Credit Administration has closed 32,000 loans for slightly more than $100,000,000 in this 12-month period. These loans, disbursed by the Federal Land Bank on its own account and as agent of the Land Bank Commissioner, are long-term amortized loans, made to farmers on farm mortgage security.

"Applications for land bank and commissioner's loans are now less than one-third what they were a year ago," Mr. Niemeyer said. "This indicates a decline of farm debts and foreclosures, a lessened need for refinancing, and an improvement in the economic position of the farmer.

"A large part of this $100,000,000 loaned by the Federal Land Bank was used for refinancing old debts. On these new loans the farmers of this district are saving on an average of 1½ per cent in interest charges and making an additional saving of 1 per cent through the elimination of mortgage renewal charges."

During 1934, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank discounted 22,000 loans for $16,000,000.

"Collections on loans discounted by the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank have been very satisfactory," Mr. Niemeyer said. "The production credit Bank have been very satisfactory," Mr. Niemeyer said. "The production credit associations have already collected 96 per cent of the cotton crop loans."

Fire Truck Is Turned Back by Muddy Road

A muddy road turned back the Hope Fire Department Tuesday afternoon when an alarm came in shortly after 3 p. m. that a negro's automobile was afire on the Hope-DeAnn road, two miles north of town.

A fire truck traveled as fas as Schooley's store, but the driver turned back when he feared the truck would bog down in soft mud. Owner of the automobile could not be learned immediately.

Large airliners now fly from coast to coast, making only three stops to refuel.

I wonder if he wishes to establish a red-light district in Hope?

They pay taxes. They also ruin boys and homes.

I say with all the good people: Men, let's save the boys and girls by keeping the very appearance of evil from them.

I have gone for weeks and months unable to do manual labor, but I had rather drag this old crippled limb over the clods until I die than to have these institutions, supported by the worst citizens in our county, live next door to my girl and your boy.

Hempstead county's name is too honorable to be ruined in the coming session of the legislature—and I urge that the people see or write our men before it is too late.

Dean Brothers Will Pitch Coming Season for the Redbirds

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Those amazing Deans—Dizzy and Daffy—stand alone in the center of the state as the National League prepares for perhaps its most interesting season.

Last year the irrepressible Dizzy with young Daffy in the role of stooge, completely stole the baseball show from Babe Ruth, the erstwhile ranking color and glamor man.

They pitched the St. Louis Cardinals into a pennant and then into a world championship. They delivered more than the 45 victories they brazenly promised in the spring. In fact, they collected 55, including four in the world series.

The Deans, together with the night baseball experiment in Cincinnati and the prospects of a three-club cat-and-dog pennant fight, are expected to keep National League interest at a high pitch and give the circuit its best season since pre-depression days.

Powel Crosley Jr., Red owner, counts on moonlight baseball to lure back into his park hundreds who now spend their afternoons at nearby race tracks. If the Cincinnati experiment is successful, the plan likely will be given a trial in other cities, notably St. Louis.

Only three of the eight clubs—New York, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh—have indicated they will have no part of night ball.

The experts concede the flag race this year to be between the champion Cardinals, the Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants, with any one of four other clubs—Pittsburgh, Boston, Philadelphia or Brooklyn—threatening to make it a four-cornered affair.

The consensus is that the Cardinals, one of the greatest teams the National has developed in years, will be the winner in a nip and tuck fight.

Cardui for Better Appetite

"I was so nervous and depressed, I felt like I wanted to tear my hair," writes Mrs. R. W. Kilpatrick, of Houston, Texas. "I would get ashamed of being so easily upset. I took Cardui at this time and after the third bottle, my strength began to mend. The pain was less. I quit having the depressed feeling."

A better appetite often is one of the first results of taking Cardui, and as nourishment is improved, many disagreeable symptoms of a run-down condition go away. But of course if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. —Adv.

HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP

Thomas

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

BY DAN THOMAS

Flyers Provide Thrills and Save Own Necks!

HOLLYWOOD. — Anything for a thrill!

For years that was the motto of Hollywood's death-defying daredevil aviators known as the Black Cats. They would do anything for a few dollars.

Hanging from a wing tip, changing planes in mid-air, making delayed parachue jumps and even cracking up planes was all in a day's work for them. And they loved the excitement.

All that has been changed during the last year, however. The Black Cats now are known as the Associated Motion Picture Pilots. Their motto has been changed to "a longer and less exciting life."

And most of the members have become largely "ground flyers," devoting a good portion of their time to giving technical advice.

"Not more than 5 per cent of my time on a picture consists of actual flying," declares Capt. E. H. Robinson, president of the film pilots' organization, who now is acting as technical adviser on "Wings in the Dark." "Most of the time I can be found at a typewriter or a conference table, discussing technicalities of air scenes to be used in a picture.

"Studio executives apparently have decided that we are more valuable as technical advisers and polits of camera planes than we were as stunt flyers. In fact, we now earn as much money just for giving advice as we once did for cracking up ships or performing other dangerous stunts."

This change in the status of the one-time stunt flyers isn't all due to studio executives, however. As they grew older, acquired families, and attained more wisdom, the pilots themselves became less willing to risk their necks just to give theater audiences a momentary thrill.

They saw too many of their buddies getting killed or spending months in hospitals recovering from injuries. Consequently, the prices for stunts went soaring.

As a result, screen writers adopted a different formula for their air stories. Instead of depending upon thrills, they started writing highly emotional and exciting situations which have proved quite as popular with the public as the hair-raising stunts. And a lot of lives are being saved.

Pie Throwing Will Come Back!

Heinie Conklin is practically unknown to picture audiences today. But there was a day, back in the pie-throwing era of the old silent films, when Heinie was a big figure.

His was an unerring aim. A pie tossed by him never failed to find its mark. Since the talkies chased pie-throwing into the discard, however, Conklin has had to get along as a bit player and gag writer.

He's not complaining, though, for he is confident his day will come again.

"Pie throwing will come back," he told me on the "Ruggles of Red Gap" set, where he has the role of a writer. "The higher the brow, the more it laughs at low comedy. And people are getting plenty highbrow these days."

Author, Author!

Lee Tracy has turned author again. Inspired by the flood of praise he received on the column he wrote for me while I was vacating a short time ago, Lee tried his hand at a short story. The result was "Silence Is Golden," a story based on Hollywood scandal mongers, which soon will be published in a national magazine.

Stocked Up

With every director in Hollywood fighting for the few top positions, one of their chief problems is getting really top-notch stories. However, this doesn't bother Edward H. Griffith, who has just completed directing Ann Harding and Bob Montgomery in "Biography of a Bachelor Girl."

During the last year Griffith has bought four stories for future use, the most recent being "The Milk of the Goat," a French play by Vendel Birouet.

Bitten Again

Dick Arlen has taken up flying again. Although an aviator during the World war, Dick has done practically no flying since. The other day a friend took him up for a short flight. And now Dick is so enthused over the modern planes that he is planning to buy one himself—unless Mrs. Dick objects too strenuously.

Tarzan Changes Faces

Hollywood now has another Tarzan—Herman Brix, member of the 1928 American Olympic team. Brix has been signed for the title role in "Tarzan and the Green Goddess," which will be filmed in the wilds of Guatemala.

Good Old Teacher!

Despite her rapid rise toward the cinema heavens, there's one old friend whom Una Merkel remembers to such extent that she still corresponds with her regularly. The friend is Sara Pettit, 92-year-old grammar school teacher who taught not only Una, but her mother, in Covington, Ky.

LOS ANGELES.—The Santa Anita Handicap! Will it be the greatest race ever run, just an ordinary, over-publicized over-night event, or a complete farce?

I'm not trying to throw cold water on the enthusiasm of the natives out here. That would be impossible, anyway.

These may be hard lines to write about a $100,000 number, but the past is overflowing with examples of races of the Santa Anita sort which have turned out to be nothing more than hollow echoes of publicity departments.

No one will deny that if Twenty Grand, one of the most remarkable horses of our day; Equipoise, Mate, Cavalcade, Gusto, Tick On, Head Play, Faireno, Azucar, and Victor Emanuel's English thoroughbred, Statesman, go to the post at the new $1,250,000 Santa Anita track on February 23, the race will be one of the finest ever staged.

If these horses should be right, and race up to their class, a $100,000 purse would be well justified.

But, do you remember the Havre de Grace Cup Handicap of 1932? The entries that day carried the names of Twenty Grand, Equipoise, Jack High, Tred Avon, Mate, and half a dozen other crack horses. Possibly no entry list ever carried such a high-class group. But race fans were sorely disappointed to find not three of the top one in the event—all scartched in the middle of the race day. Equipoise beat a poor field with ease.

There's Many a Slip

And do you remember the strenuous efforts of the Narragansett management to make a great race during the last fall? It was to be a contest of Equipoise, Calvacade, and Discovery. Not one of them got to the post, and the $25,000 purse was won by Time Supply, a good horse, but one not fit to warm the others up. Time Supply also captured the recent $25,000 Bay Meadows Handicap.

Now look over the list of entires for the Santa Anita Handicap. Twenty Grand has twice been laid up for breakdowns, and has not faced the barrier for more than two years. After his first breakdown, he got to the post for only two races, and could hardly finish the second, beaten by a horse not fit to enter the same race with him. What are his chances to stand training, and more important, to be ready for a given race on a given day?

Equipoise has ben laid up several times. He was out for a year, missing all his 3-year-old stake engagements. This year he has not been right, and training him has been painful foboth horse and trainer. True, he's running soundly again, after being out most of the summer, but who can say what will be his fate in the next two months?

Cavalcade, too, is unsound. He retired in mid-season because of leg injuries, and if he shows any signs of giving way in his present training he will not even be shipped west.

Indeed, you might well call the Santa Anita affair the "race of cripples." And why not? Tick On has been laid up at least once, Head Play has been hospitalized twice, and any number of others, such as Observant, Sarada, Riskulus, Mad Frump, and Ladysman have visited the veterinarian.

A Three-Horse Race

As for the rest, Gusto Faireno, Mate, and Larranaga definitely are not what they used to be. Mr. Khayyam, Azucar, Fleam, Jabot, High Glee, Good Goods, Semaphore, and several others really seem no better than second class, while Top Row came from the claiming ranks and might not stand up against truly high-class opposition. Most of the rest actualy are only fair performers.

It would seem difficult to justify a $100,000 purse for Time Supply, Top Row, Riskulus, Toro Nancy, Blessed Event, Bien Fait, Gay World, and their like. Pitter Pat, Gillie, and Toro Nancy will be ntried 3-year-olds, and Sir Thomas still is a maiden.

Which brings us back to the fact this race could be a great one. With just Cavalcade, Twenty Grand, and Equipoise entered, and with all three in ther best shape, the race would be worth going 3000 miles to see. That, of course, is what the Santa Anita management wants to achieve.

The New-Value Dodge Sedan $735*

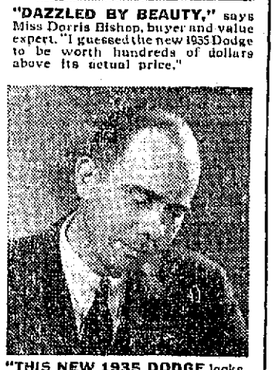

HERE IT IS—THE CAR THAT MADE 175 EXPERTS Guess Wrong!

So Much Luxury, Style and Value in the New 1935 DODGE, Experts Overguessed its Price... Couldn't Believe It Would Sell for So Little.

"I KNOW GOOD LOOKS when I see them," says Russell Patterson, famous artist and illustrator, "so it's no wonder that I guessed the price of the new 1935 Dodge too high."

"DAZZLED BY BEAUTY," says Miss Dorris Bishop, buyer and value expert. "I guessed the new 1935 Dodge to be worth hundreds of dollars above its actual price."

"I GUESSED this new 1935 Dodge to be priced much higher than it actually is," says Homer H. Bulley, former buyer for a mail order house. "Even though I'm wrong, I still think the car is worth it."

"THIS NEW 1935 DODGE looks like $1,000 model," says Karl F. Lueder, value expert. "Was I surprised to find it costs so much less! It's no wonder I figured wrong when it came to guessing the price."

175 experts—authorities in style, value, engineering—guessed too high when asked to estimate the price of the New-Value Dodge for 1935.

But no wonder they guessed wrong! Never before has any car so low-priced been so smartly designed, so sturdily built, so luxurious . . . with 95 basic advancements for new comfort, new economy, new high speed with safety.

And "Synchromatic Control," which makes driving unbelievably easy and effortless . . . the new "Airglide Ride," which gives Dodge a steadiness, smoothness and roadability never before ever approached by other cars.

The New-Value Dodge is powered with the Dodge "Red Ram" engine. It's silky smooth, with traditional Dodge dependability. Develops 85 miles an hour and up! Built to last, to save money, no matter how fast you drive. A saving of 15¢ to 20¢ on every dollar you spend for gas is now possible—with even more astonishing oil economy!

Compare delivered prices of this 1935 Dodge against other cars! You'll be surprised to learn how low they are. Only the genius of a manufacturing organization like Dodge—with 20 years' experience building fine motor cars—could create such outstanding dollar-for-dollar value.

Seven Sentenced in Massacre Plot

Four Men, Three Women Convicted for Kansas City Slayings

KANSAS CITY,—(AP)—The law's full penalty fell on the heads of four men convicted of a conspiracy which the government charged paved the way for assassination of a federal prisoner and four officers in union station plaza here June 17, 1933.

Declaring he thought the maximum penalty a "moderate one indeed," Judge Merrill C. Otis sentenced Richard T. Galatas, Hot Springs, Ark., gambler, Herbert Farmer, ex-convict of Joplin, Mo.; Frank B. (Fritz) Mulloy, Kansas City night club owner, and Louis (Doc) Stacci, Chicago night club operator, to serve two years in a federal penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000 each for their part in a conspiracy to liberate Frank Nash, recaptured federal convict.

Mrs. Galatas, Mrs. Farmer and Mrs. Vivian Mathis were sentenced to a year and a day in prison and fined $500, the sentences suspended on a three-year probation and the fines made payable September 1.

"Synchromatic" Dodge, Has Improved Engine, New Front Suspension, Streamlined Bodies

Everything contributing to driving and riding comfort, plus "synchromatic" front suspension and an interesting line-up of novel mechanical features, seems to be provided in this 4-door Touring Sedan model.

Roominess and unified decorative treatment distinguish the new Dodge 2-door Sedan. The body lines show a pleasing streamline silhouette, further emphasized by the rakishly tilted windshield, clean sides and beaver tail back.

Many improvements are offered in the Dodge high-compression "Red Ram" engine. Due to the development of a vacuum spark control, the high compression causes no knocking with ordinary fuels.

The engine has larger water jackets, spray-cooling of the exhaust valve inserts, air-cooled generator, automatic choke, automatic vacuum spark control, automatic carburetor heat control, thermostat water circulation control, oil filter, air cleaner, impulse neutralizer, and other features.

Fresh, trim lines, and a long list of interior refinements and conveniences are offered in this new Dodge Coupe in which roominess, baggage-carrying facilities, speed, power and ease of handling are a few of many outstanding qualities. Among mechanical features are the new Dodge "synchromatic" front suspension, synchro-silent transmission, patented floating power engine mountings, and many other outstanding details.

Of intense interest among innovations distinguishing the 1935 Dodge models, is a new front suspension. The system incorporates a rigid front axle, double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, leaf springs of twice the usual softness, and the Dodge ride "levelator" operating between rubber cushions and controlling the spring action.

The new suspension, termed "synchromatic" marks another forward step in riding comfort and gives the desired smooth ride, free from rolling or sway.

Detailed announcement of the 1935 Dodge line, widely awaited because of pre-season rumors crediting the new models with important innovations, will prove interesting reading because the manufacturers, not content with keeping abreast of prevailing trends, offer several unexpected features.

It is apparent that Dodge body stylists have outdone themselves in creating a series of bodies to which streamlining has been applied with eyefilling and practical beauty. The student of mechanical development also finds many interesting points designed to invest motoring with still greater comforts and, in a variety of ways, with still greater safety and economy.

New Engine and Chassis Features

The thoroughness with which Dodge engineers have gone about their task may be gathered from a partial list of 1935 Dodge details. Aside from completely redesigned bodies, these include a Dodge high-compression Red Ram engine, a new and interesting "synchromatic" front suspension, a ventilated clutch, a synchro-shift transmission, further emproved hydraulic brakes, and a number of engine and chassis features through which certain control functions, formerly the duty of the driver, are now performed automatically.

In the body interiors, made more comfortable by a perfected, clear-vision ventilation system, Dodge designers have evolved new heights of convenience. There is al almost lavish display of leg and elbow space and, in the way of appointments, about everything the exacting buyer might expect.

In dimensions, the bodies of 1935 Dodge models are considerably wider; there is more space between floor and roof, though the car's overall height is not increased. The fact that no filler-apron bridges body and running boards not only gives the body sides a pleasing aspect of tailored smoothness, but makes it possible to lower the car floors nearly 4 inches without sacrifice of road clearance.

"Synchromatic" Springing Expljained

Of strongly outstanding interest is the Dodge "synchromatic" front wheel action which, because of its unusual construction, will attract much attention. The suspension incorporates a rigid front axle; specially soft, thin-leaf springs; double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and a rubber-cushioned synchronizing mechanism called the Dodge "ride levelator."

The effectiveness of the design, according to Dodge engineers, is further assured by a redistribution of the car's spring-supported weight, a process in which the power plant is placed 8 inches further forward, while the sedan rear seats, formerly above the rear axle, are moved forward 6 inches so that all passengers now ride cradled between the axles.

The action of the Dodge levelator does away with the tendency of the car to sway or roll and makes possible the use of very flexible front springs. As the front wheel on one side passes over an obstruction, the soft spring on that side compresses. The swaying motion of the body that would result is promptly counteracted by the "levelator" which, connected to both sides of the car frame, causes disturbances occurring to one wheel to be "leveled out" not merely by the spring action on the affected side but by the combined spring action, rubber-cushioned "levelator" action and shock absorber action—on both sides. The net effect is said to be an ideally soft ride—the Dodge "Airglide" ride—and the fact that neither up and down movement of the front wheel nor the tendency of the body to roll in turning curves causes the chassis frame to assume an unpleasantly noticeable tilt.

The flat-leaf springs differ from conventional construction in several ways. The alloy steel of which they are fashioned was specially developed for the purpose. The ends of the leaves are tapered. The deflation rate, which with ordinary springs would be about 250 lbs. per inch, is only 115 lbs., making the car's front and rear springs of about equal resiliency.

The spring eyes—ordinarily formed by the topmost leaf—are, in the new Dodge, formed by the two upper leaves. To permit the necessary motion for the second leaf, it has a section removed from its center. The place of the cut-out section is taken by a spacer. The arrangement gives the spring proper resistance to steering and braking stresses and provides the flexibility that is a characteristic of the "levelator"-controlled synchromatic suspension.

Unusual Steering Mechanism

The steering mechanism of the new Dodge also is unusual; it is the Dodge cross-steering method in which the Pitman arm moves crosswise instead of lengthwise with the chassis frame, as is the case with ordinary steering. This construction contributes materially to steering ease and makes it impossible for road shocks to be communicated to the steering wheel.

The patented floating power engine mountings—which have been a Dodge feature for several years—are in the 1935 models, with a simplified front mount and relocated rear supports. At the points where it approaches the chassis frame, the power plant is cushioned on rubber bonded to steel bases in such a manner that the engine rocks about its natural axis and there is no actual metal-to-metal supporting contact between engine and chassis frame. Vibration is thus completely smothered before it reaches the body or frame.

87 H. P. With High Compression

Having a bore of 3¼ inches and a stroke of 4⅜ inches, the Dodge Red Ram engine delivers 87 horsepower, with a standard 6.5 compression head. An engine detail worthy of mention is the shaping of the cylinder-head combustion space which, giving the incoming fuel mixture increased turbulence, contributes materially to complete conversion of the gasoline into power.

Exhaust valve seats of special heat-resisting alloy steel, introduced by Dodge in 1933, are also used this year. However, for 1935 Dodge provides still another innovation designed to lengthen the life of exhaust valves. The improvement takes the form of spray-cooling of the exhaust valve seats through a steel tube extending through the cylinder block. This tube has openings from which water is kept playing against the cylinder side of the exhaust valve seats.

As the exhaust-valve spray-cooling tube is directly connected to the water pump, cool water is delivered through holes in the tube and sprayed on the six hot exhaust valve seats.

The engine cooling system has been further improved by extending the water jackets downward the full length of the cylinder barrels. The modified water jacketing is regarded as important because it results in uniform cooling of the cylinder bores. This uniform cooling of the cylinder bores together with the spray cooling of the exhaust valve seats results in uniform expansion of the cylinder bores when the engine is operating at high speed and very hot. The bores remain cylindrical and there is a marked reduction in the consumption of oil.

The engine crankshaft has seven balancing weights for reducing bearing loads. In addition, an impulse neutralizer is mounted on the forward end of the crankshaft. The value cam faces of the Dodge Red Ram engine are designed for quiet action with the tappets and tappet adjustment is very infrequent because of the use of valve seat inserts, which do not permit the valves o pound into the cylinder block.

The aluminum alloy pistons are of an improved steel-strut, controlled-expansion type giving an effective compression seal regardless of whether the engine is hot or cold. Four piston rings are provided, two upper compression rings and two lower oil control rings; the latter function as scrapers which pick up surplus lubricant and pass it, through openings in the piston skirt, back into the main oil reservoir.

Dodge Clutch Ventilated

Engine lubrication is by forced feed. In being raised from the crankcase reservoir the oil, pumped through an oil manifold running through the cylinder block, enters passages drilled through the cylinder block. Through these shock-proof leads the lubricant is forced to main, camshaft and connecting rod bearings and to the timing-drive chain. All oil, before entering the pump housing, is screened; in returning to the base reservoir it is drawn through an outside-mounted oil purifier.

A noteworthy detail of the Dodge clutch is a cushioned hub in which spiral compression springs absorb the shocks arising from variations in power tranmission. The clutch housing is ventilated and the operation of the clutch itself has been made so easy that a foot pressure of only 26 pounds and an exceedingly short pedal movement will disconnect the engine from the transmission.

Dodge brakes are of the time-tested hydraulic type which the company's engineers regard as most dependable because they act with equal effect on all four wheels and do not require periodical adjustment. The 10-inch brake drums are of a composite, built-up type combining a cast-iron braking ring with a steel back. The braking ring has air-cooling ribs. The braking surface or contact area of the brake has been increased 20 per cent in the 1935 Dodge.

In addition to the pedaloperated hydraulic service brakes, the new Dodge is equipped with a separate, powerful propeller-shaft type parking brake.

Many Automatic Controls

Dodge engineers have exerted themselves considerable to make the operation of the 1935 models as free as possible from the manipulations that heretofore called for judgment and experience on the part of the driver.

The choke button, for instance, is no more. The choking of the carburetor intake passage prior to starting is now done by an automatic device working part thermostatically and part electrically.

The setting of the ignition spark, formerly largely a matter of guesswork, also has been made automatic, in two ways—by a centrifugal governor and by a special vacuum spark control.

The precise amount of heat to be applied to the fuel mixture is doled out, automatically, by a thermostatically-operated carburetor heat control.

The engine temperature is kept under constant check by a thermostat incorporated in the water circulating system.

The synchro-silent transmission is designed to cause the gears to be meshed when turning at the same speed, an arrangement making speed changes noiseless and safe.

More and Better Ventilation

More than ordinary care has been given to the matter of ventilation, the body interior not being the only place to receive attention. The windows are so arranged that an initial turning of the front door crank creates a crescent-shaped opening in the upper forward corner of the window. As this opening is situated behind the substantial shoulder of the window frame, the oncoming air stream, in passing over the edge of the frame, creates a suction that draws the air from the car interior. The adjustable windshield is another feature of the Dodge perfected clear-vision ventilation system.

The cowl section of the body is additionally ventilated through a screen-guarded ventilator. Hood ventilation is automatic, through highly decorative louvers. Further ventilation of the under-hood engine compartment is provided through auxiliary louvers in the lower inner side of the fender aprons, below the so-called "satwalk" bridging the space between the curved fender portion and the engine hood. The engine crankcase is ventilated through a steel tube around the muzzle of which a partial vacuum is created by the motion of the car. The clutch has provisions for ventilating and air-cooling it. The current generator is both ventilated and air-cooled. Even the gasoline line is now air cooled.

Eight Body Types are Offered

Interesting auxiliary features of the new Dodge line for 1935 include a new lighting system in which last year's asymetric head light beams are supplanted by a light pattern formed by parallel beams of maximum legal intensity. The headlamps use one double-filament bulb and onep arkin light bulb.

The lighting of the dash instrument is direct, through two tubular lamp that light on being slightly withdrawn and may be rotated to project the beams in different directions.

Eight body models are offered on the new Dodge chassis: They are: Two coupes, one with and the other without rumble seat—one exquisitely leather upholstered convertible coupe —2-door and 4-door sedans—2-door touring sedan (with trunk)—4-door touring sedan (with trunk). Fender wells for the side mounting of spare tires are provided if desired.

The professor of economics had been talking steadily for more than an hour, and his class was becoming a trifle restless.
